TIPS ON TO-MORROW'S RACES.

Horses Whose Form Should Bring Them First Under the Wire.

The entries at Cliftton for to-morrow's races

The entries at Cliftton for to-morrow's races at are very attractive and should produce an expectation day's sport.

The first race, at five-eighths of a mile, contains a fair fot of sprinters, of whom Dixte appears to be the beat. The distance just suits him and he should win. Censer may be the runner up, and Chipman may beat the others.

The second race is at a mile, and there is not much choice at the poor lot entered. Yesterday Gettyaburg appeared to be getting into something like his old shape. He led for a mile and then died away. He may win to-morrow. Ebils ought to be the runner up and Endarer should beat the others.

The third race is a five furiong dash for two-yoar-oids. A poor lot are entered, the beat of them being probably the Mascotte filly, who is in a extremely light weight. Melville ought to be good enough to run second and Waller Dake ought to beat the others.

The handleap at a mile and a sixteenth should beat the chers.

The handleap at a mile and a sixteenth weight conceded him by Al Farrow and Barge he should about win. Badge may beat al Farrow for the place.

The fifth race is at six and a half forlongs.

Mine B. is probably the beat of the lot, and weight conceded him by Al Farrow and Barge he should win. Insight may be the runner up, and Chipman may beat the others.

such a position ?" "I did not know much shout him, but I anerstood he was competent." "You knew that ne was a leader of a Tam-

"Why was it you falled to keep the streets cleaned and resigned?" inquired Mr. Ivins, nsinuatingly. "Come, tell us all about it." "I didn't fail," protested Mr. Loomis. "I

Mr. Hagan told Mr. Ivies very frankly that when he assumed his duties he decharged a good many men who were offensive partisans and put Tammany men in their places. That, he understood, was the method pursued by all the political organizations in the city, and he believed that the victors ought to have the spoils.

"It's not so bad as it used to be when the County Democracy was in power. They discharged 50 per cent more men than we did,"

"If the streets are not kept clean don't you taink that the Commissioner is technically guilty of violating the law?" asked Mr. Ivins.

"He might be technically guilty, but not morally. The present law is too strict and is untair to contractors."

"How much money do you taink would be necessary to keep the atrects clean at all times."

"I think $1,750,000 a year would do it."

Commissioner Beattle took the stand again and presented some estimates as to the cost of cleaning the city under the block system and the combined block and machine aystem. The former would cost at least $100,000 more than the suproximation for the coming year, and would not be nearly as effective as the combined block and machine system.

"Are you getting enough money new to keep the streets clean?"

"Not enough to fainf the obligations expressed in the law."

"Then you do not hold yourself responsible for the condition of the streets?"

"Absolutely no, nor the force under me."

Mr. Beattle said that the only reason why he continued in office was that so long as he had taken it on the understanding that if he could show that a larger appropriation was needed to properly clean the streets he should get it, he felt that he ought to see the thing through. "Otherwise I should have resigned long ago," added the Commissioner. "I think I can show that a larger appropriation is needed."
